

- 1. What, how, and who did you share insights with? Don't use names just state the relationship (e.g. – I spoke with my mother on FaceTime about ... .)
- 2. What were you able to share with another person(s)?

1 And 2:

My aunt Terry and I read an excerpt from Elder Bednar's talk located in the reading packet from the Liahona, Marriage Is Essential to His Eternal Plan. We read the part with Elder Parley P. Pratt's quote where he documents what Joseph Smith had taught him about Christ-like love.

- 3. What did you experience as you discussed or taught these concepts outside of class? How might this experience help you be a better person? If the experience was not a positive one, write about that too but in the context of what you learned from the experience to make you a better person.
- 4. What did you learn about their experience, perspectives or what life is like for them?

3 And 4:

This weeks lesson was really successful, we talked about Joseph Smith's time and how a lot of the things he did, i.e. polygamy was because Jesus Christ's gospel had to be brought back in it's fullness. Similar to how there will be a lamb sacrificed at the second coming. It was very fascinating and comforting to learn.

While I didn't feel the Spirit with me through the whole lesson, or at least in a powerful way, I did feel like what we were doing was good. This experience helps me to be a better person because I have an increased knowledge of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

- 5. In what ways did this experience affect your relationship with this person(s) or influence your lives for the better?

I think it will help our relationship because when we accept and learn new things from other people it makes it easier in the future to learn more things from them.

- 6. What understanding or testimony did you gain or strengthen through this experience?

I gained a better understanding of the times that Joseph Smith lived in, and what exactly the Lord required of His people at that time and why it had to be. It was all quite fascinating.
